

ABSTRACT

A system for transmitting data packets over an air interface includes logic for generating a number of redundant packets and parity information. The data packets, redundant packets and parity information may then be transmitted to a distribution device that provides error correction codes. The distribution device may then transmit the data to one or more destinations over an air interface.